CADCA Indigenous Boot Camp Training

Public Health Strategies to Combat Substance Use in Indigenous Communities

CADCA's four-day Indigenous boot camp training is an intensive, culturally-based version of the National Coalition Academy, covering:

- The public health model and prevention science
- Coalition work
- CADCA's Seven Strategies for Community Change
- All elements of the Strategic Prevention Framework

This training, held in conjunction with CADCA Mid-Year Training Institute, will feature a special presentation on Missing and Murdered Indigenous Relatives, discussing substance use as a contributing factor, from Jeannie Hovland, member of the Flandreau Santee Sioux Tribe, CADCA Board of Directors and CADCA Indigenous People's Advisory Council.

Training facilitated by:

- Melanie Johnson | Member of the Sac and Fox Nation, CADCA Indigenous People's Advisory Council
- Raquel Ramos | Member of the Comanche Nation, CADCA Indigenous People's Advisory Council
- Angela Da Re | CADCA Trainer

Enrollment for this 4-day training is free of charge to participants.
